Senator McManus Takes Part in Lee National Denim Day

Event Raises Money for the Susan J. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation

LANSING – Senator Michelle McManus, R-Lake Leelanau, joined her colleagues in the Michigan Senate in the fight against breast cancer this week.

“As the most common type of cancer among women, it is important to raise awareness for early detection and treatment,” said McManus. “Lee National Denim Day provides a visual reminder and serves as a significant to actively participate in the search for cure.”

Senators and staff participated in the Lee National Denim Day, which raises money for breast-cancer research, education, screening and treatment programs. The event, now in its eighth year, is the world’s largest single-day fund-raiser for breast-cancer research. All of the money raised goes to the Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation. Participants made a minimum $5 donation and wore denim, a pink lapel pin or other pink-colored clothing to demonstrate their support.

More information on Lee National Denim Day and the Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation can be found at www.komen.org.
